

How Can Your Face Help You Grow Your Business Faster?

"A man finds room in the few square inches of his face for the traits of all his ancestors; for the expression of all his history, and his wants." ~Ralph Waldo Emerson, Conduct of Life

Your face contains the clues to your true nature. That is, who we are and what we've experienced and where we're going is reflected in our face – that's what makes us unique. Our personal emotional and energy patterns show up distinctively in our features and can help guide us to our next best level in business.

By understanding your face, you become more aware of your own decision-making, relationship to personal power, and how you perceive the world, amongst a whole lot more. Face reading allows you to be more compassionate with yourself, as you understand how you are "wired" from the inside out, how your cellular memories are contributing to your current reactions and decisions, and supports you in relating with others more healthfully.

You understand your own boundaries, needs and wants more clearly, which is a very attractive quality. When others feel your clarity, it lets them be who they are too – you are setting the stage for true relationship vs. attachments, obligations or expectations. You're also opening to new energy that is likely to be filled with all kinds of opportunities, abundance and prosperity – after all, as open as you are to receiving is to the degree that you have the opportunity to receive. As attractive as you are is as attracted such things are to you (aka, the law of attraction).

In terms of business, face reading will help you know how you process decisions, how to negotiate more effectively (through understanding the other's face), and how to set yourself up for success. For example, there is a characteristic at the top of your nose that tells you if you need to delegate – and, if that's not satisfied, it will manifest as you bossing your friends and family around. However, if you simply hire an assistant, that satisfies that need and the people around you are likely to be a lot happier!

Three Things to Look For In Your Face:

1. Notice your lips. If the bottom one is very full, you are likely to be very generous. Consider where you might be over-giving, or giving for the wrong reasons to grow your business – that could be an energy drain. Also, if you have a client with this feature, it could explain why they give to you when they hired you to "give" some solution to them!
2. Notice your eyebrows. If you have a lot of space between your eye and your eyebrow, that means you likely need time and space to get to know people or a situation. It's probable that you will observe what's happening before you jump in – it's just the way you're wired. And if you have a new client with this feature, you wouldn't want to walk in and greet them with a big bear hug – they need time and space to get to know you first!

3. Notice your chin. If your chin sticks out, it's an indicator that you could be a little stubborn about things (actually, that could be a good quality for an entrepreneur!). However, if you find yourself repeating patterns where you're not able to let go of decisions, conversations or relationships, consider where you're being stubborn about what you think you know. And if your client has this feature, don't be surprised if they get stuck in what they think they know and don't appreciate what you offer the way you would expect – they're just wired that way!

There's so much more that goes into the ancient art and science of face reading, but as you become more aware of your own tendencies and patterns, it will make you more sensitive to others as well. And increased sensitivity to the world around you keeps you more engaged with what could be coming in to help you grow your business faster!

#####

Lynn Scheurell uses her intuition combined with the art of face reading to help people understand who they are from the inside out. By considering facial features, structures and characteristics, it's possible to understand how you relate to your world, make decisions, relate to others and even the path by which you can most quickly transform yourself to your next best level. Download a free article on "The Top Ten Things Your Face Says About You" at www.LynnReadsFaces.com.